

Ethical Considerations for Working With Military Members

July 2, 2025

A Live, Interactive Webinar

Description:

Mental healthcare providers working with military service members often face ethical challenges unique to this population. Personal and professional ethical practice is contingent on effective application of personal and cultural morals, and professional regulations and expectations. Decision-making models are presented to address ethical dilemmas, with specific discussion of the role of dual-relationships within a clinical framework. The topics of informed consent/limits of confidentiality, boundaries of cultural and clinical competence, disposition-driven diagnoses, multiple relationships, mixed agency and professional fitness are all discussed in breadth and depth in the context of practitioners working with military-connected clients. Special emphasis will be placed on outlining the differences in how certain issues are managed differently in military settings (e.g., limits of confidentiality). Multiple case vignettes are discussed in workshop/group format to ensure comprehensive, nuanced discussion. (Hersh, 2022; National Association of Social Workers, 2021; Jiang et al., 2021)

Instructor Biographies:

Jeffrey H. Cook, Ph.D., is a clinical psychologist serving as the Director, Military Training, Education & Research (MTER) for the Center for Deployment Psychology at the Uniformed Services University of the Health Sciences in Bethesda, Maryland. In this capacity, he oversees the Center's military focused research and education programs.

Dr. Cook retired from the Navy after 23 years of service in the United States Navy and Marine Corps. Dr. Cook served in various capacities during his military career including Marine reservist, Navy corpsman, and clinical psychologist. As an active duty psychologist, he served as the Mental Health Division Officer in Okinawa, Japan, ship psychologist on the U.S.S. George Washington, and as the Department Head for the Psychological Health and Traumatic Brain Injury Program at NNMCM Bethesda, MD. He deployed to Fallujah, Iraq in support of Operation Iraqi Freedom, as well as other brief deployments during his career.

Dr. Cook graduated from the Uniformed Services University of the Health Sciences with a doctorate in clinical psychology and completed a clinical psychology internship at the National Naval Medical Center (NNMC), Bethesda MD. He currently serves as adjunct faculty at USUHS.

Dr. Cook's professional interests include cognitive behavioral therapy, dissemination and implementation of evidence-based treatment approaches, clinic optimization, and combat-related PTSD.

Allison Hannah, MSW, LCSW is a Military Behavioral Health Social Worker for the Center for Deployment Psychology (CDP) at the Uniformed Services University of the Health Sciences in Bethesda, Maryland. She assists in the implementation and expansion of the Star Behavioral Health Providers Program (SBHP). SBHP trains civilian behavioral health providers to work with service members, veterans, and their families. The mission is to expand the availability of high-quality behavioral health services, especially for those in the reserve components.

Allison is a Veteran of the United States Army and United States Army Reserves. During Allison's time in the military from 2003 through 2016, she served in various occupation specialties as a bridgecrew member, chaplain assistant, and most recently as a Human Resources Officer. While serving in the active duty component, Allison deployed to Iraq in support of Operation Iraqi Freedom 09-11. She also held additional duties during her tenure training service members in suicide prevention and as a victim advocate with the Sexual Harassment and Assault Response and Prevention (SHARP) program.

Allison received her Bachelor of Social Work from University of St. Thomas in St. Paul, MN in 2007 and her Master of Social Work from Loyola University Chicago in 2015. Allison is currently pursuing her Doctor of Social Work from the University of St. Thomas in St. Paul, MN.

Allison's previous clinical work includes positions in community mental health, the Iowa City Health Care System in the Homeless Veteran Program and with the Defense Health Agency within the Child and Family Behavioral Health Services section at an active-duty Army base. Allison is trained in Trauma-Focused Cognitive Behavioral Therapy (TF-CBT) and is a Registered Play Therapist TM specializing in using evidence-based approaches to address trauma, adjustment and attachment related disorders.
